EXAMINER NEWS SERVICES

MOSCOW — Soviet film director Sergei Paradzhanov has died after a lengthy illness, the Tass news agency announced Saturday. He was 66.

Mr. Paradzhanov, an ethnic Armenian, was well known in the Soviet Union as the director of films such as "The Shadows of Forgotten Ancestors" and the "Legend of Suram Fortress."

One of the most prominent Soviet film directors, Mr. Paradzhanov was sentenced to five years in jail in 1974 for spreading venereal disease, trafficking in art objects, anti-Soviet agitation and homosexuality. An international campaign won his release in 1978.

At one time he was reported to have been forced to survive by begging on the streets.

His death was announced at a session of the Supreme Soviet of Armenia in Yerevan, the republic's capital.

Call it the fung shui factor. It is a Chinese belief that buildings and objects arranged in a certain way can bring good luck.

Some Chinese merchants viewed the Embarcadero Freeway as a dragon rising from the bay, bringing good luck to their community.

Now, they say, the dragon's back is broken — and the fung shui has turned against Chinatown.
